

This morning we received the directive from the Montana University System (MUS) that "As of March 23rd, all MUS campuses will, in every instance possible, transition all in-class instruction to online or other remote teaching modalities that do not require in-class presence."

Our campus community has been preparing for this situation and faculty have been diligently working on plans to move our classes online in anticipation of this announcement.

While courses will be moving online, our commitment to students and the support of their success remains the same. Please continue to monitor your Helena College email for updates on how you can access advising, tutoring, and library services.

Please check your email frequently and over spring break as you will be hearing from each of your instructors about how your class will be moving forward.

We know this is a stressful time and we are here to support you. Additional updates and information will be shared as this situation develops. Again, please be sure to check your Helena College email regularly and keep an eye out for information from your instructors about classes.
